A Seafarer's Prayer (©Tony Finn, 2008)

Cast adrift on the seas of life

'Neath a sky so angry and grey,

My God, in You must I place my faith

That You will show me the way.

The clouds are dark and my little ship

Is ill-equipped for the storm.

Oh, how will I steer when my rudder is gone

And all of my sails are torn?

The seas are rough and the mountainous waves

Have driven me far from the land –

Oh God, please give me the calm that I crave,

And stretch out Your helping hand.

Life is a voyage of peaks and troughs

In a vessel that's ever fraught:

How I long for the sight of the harbour lights,

That I may be safely in port.

So, God, help me steer an even course

And send me a quiet sea:

For that do I pray at the start of each day –

My God, please answer my plea.

Let me not fear of the trials of life,

However deep they may be;

I travel in hope that You, my God

Will be here to look after me.
